

Zorro is an interesting little 7 pound Chihuahua. He was rescued from Texas where his former owner was tired of him and decided that they were going to take him to the shelter and have him put to sleep. Zorro has trust issues, but all he needs is someone to give him some time to come around and not quit on him. He would like to be an only little guy with no cats at all. His trust issues come from his former owners who were not very nice to him. We think he was left outside a lot and not given very much attention. Zorro deserves a second chance at a home, love and companionship. Had Zorro gone to the shelter, he would not be here now, but he is here and we believe it is for a reason. We believe that Zorro is going to make a great companion, he just needs to find one adopter out there willing to take a chance on him. If you would like to meet Zorro and see if he is the one for you please fill out an application at
